Test 15

Read the following text and answer the questions.

Colour Symbolism

Why is pink often thought to be a colour for girls and blue a colour for boys ? The answer depends mainly on personal experiences and cultural background because colour means different things to different people around the world.

The meaning of a creation colour may change depending on your culture. Green is one of these colours. It is an important colour for Muslims and represents paradise. To the Egyptians, green is a holy colour and the hope and joy of spring. Meanwhile in Japan, green means long life. It is said that green relaxes the mind and body, relives pain and has a great healing power. In fact, people who work in green environments have been found to have fewer health problems. The colour green also helps depression. When a bridge in London was painted green, the number of people jumping off the bridge and killing themselves, dropped by 34%. !

For many people, red is a favourite colour. It is a colour of love, energy, fire, blood and war. In many cultures red is connected with money and good luck. In Hindu, Islamic and Chinese culture red is a traditional colour that brides wear. In China, it is also the colour of the Chinese New Year, Where houses are decorated in red and children are given money in red envelopes. In addition, many restaurants decorators believe that red makes people feel hungry and customers eat more if red is included in the restaurant décor. Red also catches a person's eye quickly and is often used in commercial web sites to encourage people to make a purchase. It is a trick played by them.

Like red and green, blue is another universal colour of water and the sky. In Greece, people believe that wearing blue given you protection against evil. People who believe this wear a blue necklace or bracelet. Blue like green is another calming colour and it has been found that people sleep better in blue rooms. However, some people suggest that unlike red, blue makes people eat less. So, if you are thinking of losing weight blue plates can help you to do this as we seem to eat less when eating from them.

The next time you are deciding on what to wear of what colour to decorate your room, think about the colour carefully. Not only may your colour choice mean something different in different cultures, it may also make you or someone near by, think, feel and react differently.
